GUTHRY FAMILY OF GREENE CO., PENN.

THE GUTHRIES OF SCOTLAND

The origin of the name of Guthrie goes so far back in antiquity that it has been lost. It is said by antiquaries to be of Pictish tribal tongue and akin to some Icelandic and Danish names. It is so ancient as to hold the distinction of having a legend concerning the beginning.

"One of the kings of Scotland was driven on Bervie Brow which was a rock on the Kincardine shire coast on the east coast of Scotland. He found a solitary fisherwoman on the shore and being hungry he asked her to gut twa fish for him. 'I'll gut three', volunteered the loyal dame. 'Well', replied the king, 'Gut three, forever thou shalt be.'"

The family origin was certainly on the eastern shore of Scotland in the county of Angus or as it is now known Forfarshire, where the race was cradled at a very early time. The family apparently took the name from church lands in the parish of Guthrie. As early as 1308 there was a barony of Guthrie held by the Earl of Crawford. In 1440 a George Guthrie was recorded in some land grants. But the first distinct member of the family to leave any record behind him was David Guthrie, an esquire to the Earl of Crawford. He was a remarkable man, being a soldier, churchman and lawyer and was knighted by the English king. Around 1465 he bought the barony of Guthrie of the Earl of Crawford. He also purchased the patronage and church of Guthrie from the Abbey of Arbroath not far away and made it into a collegiate church with a provost and three canons. He had inherited the estate of his father Alexander Guthrie of Kincaldrum which was in the family down to 1676. He was the most distinguished member of the long line of Guthries holding many posts of honor. He was Lord High Treasurer and Lord Chief Justice of Scotland. He was once sent to France on an errand for the king. He was also a deputy of the Sheriff of Forfarshire and armour bearer to King James III. Some of the history of the family may be found in The Land of the Lindsays, by Andrew Jervise. They were rough, these lairds, as people of their day were rough; they and the Garden family held a deadly feud, waylaying each other on the highway between Brechin and Dundee and taking lives without mercy. Sir David's son fell at Flodden along with his son and three brothers-in-law. During the reign of Charles I of England, difficulties arose in the family and the present laird Alexander sold his estate to his cousin, Bishop Guthrie of Moray. Bishop Guthrie belonged to the Colliston branch. He had a brother James, ancestor of the Craigie and Taybank line. After the sale of Alexander's lands (he who was laird of Guthrie, or in other words Guthrie of Guthrie) Sir David's line ceased to be land holders. Sir David had built a castle and fortifications for himself on the lands of Guthrie. It was occupied by descendants of his kinsman Bishop Guthrie as late as 1882. You may see it at this day (1955). There were several branches of the Guthrie family, all landholders in Angus (Forfarshire). They married into the families of nobles and the gentry and held positions of honor as well as dishonor, in some cases, according to our present day views of ethical behaviour. And one Guthrie was executed as a witch.

There is a provincial couplet referring to at least three freeholders of the name in the shire of Angus as follows:

Guthrie of Guthrie
And Guthrie of Gaigie,
Guthrie of Taybank
And Guthrie of Craigie.

Also there were the following families listed as kin to the others:

Guthries of Carbuddo of Colliston
of Kinblethmont of Menmuir
of Pitforth

So from any one of these branches our ancestors may have stemmed. Apparently they were all related.

At different periods Guthries went over to northern Ireland and became Scotch-Irish as in the case of our direct line. Both here and in Scotland the spelling of the name has been changed. Probably this happened when clerks made out legal documents as deeds and so on. In Scotch records the name of the same Guthrie will be found spelled in various ways, as here in America: Guthrie, Guthery, Guthrey, Guttry, and so on. Our ancestor used Guthery, but whether from choice or thrust on him by local spelling by sound cannot be determined. Wherever old families are found there will be seen corruptions of the original spelling.

In this paper different lines use different spelling. This writer has seen fit to use that which has been sent in.

To account for the division of Colonel Guthery's descendants in this matter the following is reported. Joseph Guthery's three sons, William, John Dever Sr., and Isaac Frazier Sr. were all brought up to follow their father's habit. Then when Isaac's two older sons went to college at Ohio Wesleyan, an English professor told them only illiterate people would corrupt the proper form which was Guthrie. They and their branch of the family for the most part followed the suggestion and so did William's children, but John and his family by that time had too many legal documents made out in the former way and could not without much trouble change. And William's grandchildren who remained in Marion County, in common with the second cousins living about Marion, went back to their great grandfather's "illiterate" style. Many Gutherys have attended Ohio Wesleyan since that time. Maybe English professors have grown more tolerant. No one has called them illiterate for their original way in this respect.

OUR ANCESTOR LIEUTENANT-COLONEL JOHN GUTHERY

The first ancestor of which we have any knowledge was John Guthery of Greene County, Pennsylvania. At the time he settled there it was a part of Virginia. There was a dispute over the boundary line of the two colonies; eventually Pennsylvania won out but not until 1783. In order to get a better idea of John Guthery's whereabouts before, during and after the Revolution, let us have a look at the complicated changes that took place in Western Pennsylvania.

Bedford County included Greene from 1771 until 1773, prior to which time Greene was a part of Cumberland County but little recognized as such.

Westmoreland County was set up February 26th, 1773 and included Washington and Greene but all west of the Monongahela clung to Virginia allegiance and was considered Augusta County (of Virginia) until the line was run in 1779 and approved in 1783. (Take careful note of this because it was on the west bank of the Monongahela that John Guthery lived and he would naturally consider himself a Virginian.)

Washington County was set up March 28th, 1773 and included Greene County.

Greene County was set up in 1796, February 9th.

It was in 1797 or 1798 that John Guthery emigrated to Ohio, so he could not have lived in Greene County, Pennsylvania longer than a year or two. John Guthery's address was changed four times from 1771 to 1796 although he remained in the same locality.

There was a Colonel John Guthrie of Revolutionary fame living in Westmoreland County, the county seat of which is Greensburgh, which we must not confuse with our ancestor. It would be easy to do so as Laurence Guthrie in his history of other branches of Guthries in America has already done so. In this case the activities of our John Guthery have been attributed to the Colonel Guthrie of Westmoreland County, as well as his own achievements. This mistake was very easy to make, since our ancestor had only public records to his credit with never a biographer. With Mr. Howard Leckey's researches on the men of Greene County we now know who and what our ancestor was. Another fact to puzzle a genealogist was that the county seat of Greene County was once Greensburgh but was changed to Greensboro to avoid confusion with the other Greensburgh.

Mr. Leckey says there is so far as he has been able to find out no connection with the Guthries of Westmoreland County. They lived a hundred miles apart in country marked by mountain ridges when communications were difficult. Their history has been given by Mr. Laurence Guthrie. It seems evident that our Gutherys were first Virginians though they may have lived in one of the early Pennsylvania settlements where so many Scotch-Irish started from. There is a record of an Archibald "Guttry" in the French and Indian War, a shadowy figure who lived in Lancaster, Pa. settlement, who afterward went to western Pennsylvania, and Mr. Laurence Guthrie suggests he was possibly the father of John Guthery's neighbor in Greene County, Archibald Guthrie. Mr. Leckey believes John and Archibald were brothers. John named a son Archibald. All this is merely circumstantial evidence and may be taken only as such, no proof is at present available. The Archibald Guthrie of Greene County was a member of the same regiment as our ancestor in the Revolution when they made the severe march into New Jersey. He lost his life during this campaign. He left many descendants, some of whom still live in Greene County.

The following account of John Guthery's military career was sent to Mrs. Carroll H. May and is to be published in Mr. Leckey's book on the Ten Mile Country, vol. VIII-IX.

John Guthery (Guthrie, Guthrie, Guthrey, Gutrey) one of the prominent pioneer settlers on the Monongahela, settled near the mouth of the Big Whiteley Creek before 1772, where his name is found as an inmate or boarder in the Springhill Township, Bedford County tax lists for 1772. According to his pension application made from Pike County, Ohio, October 13, 1820, he was living there in May 1776, when he enlisted in Captain Wilson's company (probably Lt. Col. George Wilson) of the 8th Pennsylvania Regiment of the Continental line, under the command of Colonel Aeneas McCay with which he was identified until May 1779. Records of the regiment show that it was recruited at Fort Pitt and that many of its men came from the Monongahela country. It assembled at Kittanning in the fall of 1776 and marched from there in January 1777 to join Washington's army at Quibbletown, New Jersey. This march in midwinter was a terrible ordeal and many of the men died from exposure. (See Pennsylvania Archives: The 8th Pennsylvania travelled over hills for one hundred and fifty miles in the snow to Quibbletown, New Jersey, never once seeing a house on the way, but encamped in the snow. Many were unused to such conditions and died on the way; the Colonel and Lieutenant-Colonel and also Archibald Guthery Sr., who may have been brother to John Guthery.)

After taking part in the battles of Brandywine and Germantown, the regiment went to Bound Brook, New Jersey, where it again saw battle. It was returned to Fort Pitt in 1778 and a part of it was sent to Fort Macintosh, where, John Guthery says, he was discharged, after taking part in Colonel Broadhead's expedition against the Indians at Coschocton and on the Muskingum River. It would appear that while at Fort Macintosh John Guthery was made an ensign on December 21st, 1778. (For a complete record of this regiment see Pennsylvania Archives, Series V. vol. 3, pp. 305-376.)

On his return to the Monongahela, John Guthery was elected captain of a militia company from his district on Big Whiteley Creek and according to William Harrod Jr. in his interview with L. C. Draper, maintained one of the protective forts of the section, named Guthery's Fort or Fort Guthery, which was located beside the Monongahela River near the mouth of Big Whiteley Creek and was occupied from 1776 to 1783.

The militia was the Minute Men of the region. They were subject to call without previous notice and many of them saw more rigorous service than the Continental regulars. They consisted of boys from the ages of fourteen to the early twenties largely, commanded by the older men, though boys not yet in their teens were sent out on scouting expeditions, with more mature members of the militia, along the wilderness trail to reconnoiter and report back to the neighborhood forts any news of an impending uprising. The discipline was loose and time of service was short. If they grew tired of the life or if they were needed back home, they simply went home and the term "deserter" did not convey a sense of ignominy that it does today. No disgrace was attached to it. Our John Guthery as Captain of one of these Battalions was very active both in maintaining the fort near his home and in acting as leader in scouting expeditions, or, as it was also called with perfectly honorable significance---spying. Reference to his service in this capacity is to be found in the Pennsylvania Archives, Series VI, vol. 2, pp. 18-19, pp. 271.

Year 1782: First Battalion, Washington County. Recruited in Whiteley and Greene townships (now Greene County). A few were from Dunkard township.

John Guthery (Captain)

Eleazer Long, Lieutenant	Richard Dotson (Dolloson)
Gideon Long, Ensign	Sergeant
Matthew Hanan, Sergeant	John Roberts, Sergeant

The names of fifty-two or more privates make up the list. And the following names are given of men who "also served tours with Captain Guthery".

Samuel Swindler	John Minor
Cecil Davis	John Shipman

We also learn from "Revolutionary Soldiers Buried in Ohio", p. 167 that he was a Captain of this company from 1780 to 1790 and did further service in 1793. According to Mr. Howard Leckey, Sr., he was Lieutenant-Colonel of the 1st Regiment Pennsylvania Militia of Washington County in Anthony Wayne's campaign. His sons William and Archibald fought under him there. This account also states that Captain John Guthery was born on April 14, 1744. If this is true his statement in his pension application saying he was ninety years old in 1820 would be in error. In this application he says he was born of Scotch-Irish parents. The family Bible says he was born April 14, 1744. This record also says that on March 13, 1771 he married Lydia Baldwin. She was the daughter of Francis and Charity (Harlan-Hackney) Baldwin. The records show that Lydia Baldwin had a tract of land warranted to her under the title "Lydia's Bottom" on November 1, 1770. It was situated near the mouth of Big Whiteley Creek on the Monongahela River and was patented on April 17, 1792 by John Guthery and his wife Lydia. It was on this site that he maintained Fort Guthery from 1776-1783 and it was here they lived until they migrated to Ohio. The John Guthery-Lydia Baldwin patent contained 321 acres. Other Baldwin land totaled more than 1000 acres. Deeds of record showing evidence of the sales can be seen in the Harrisburg Land Office. "Lydia's Bottom" was situated adjacent to the present site of Greensboro, Pennsylvania, which was laid out by Elias Stone, brother-in-law of John Guthery in the year 1781.

As has been previously stated it was first called Greensburg but later changed to Greensboro to avoid confusion with Greensburg of Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania.

In Mr. Howard L. Leckey's History of the Ten Mile Country, which was in the Monongahela region on the west side of the river and included the country drained by the Big Whiteley, the Little Whiteley, Dunkard, Muddy and Wheeling Creeks, he says two churches were built; one at Garard's Fort the other at Jacob Van Meter's plantation on Muddy Creek. (Farms were called plantations then.) The Reverend Mr. John Corbly preached at both churches twice a month. These were of the Baptist persuasion and were stern in their doctrines and members were willing, as in the case of the earlier Puritans, to have their lives scrutinized and judged by their fellow community members. John Guthery's name, with his wife Lydia, is on this early list and may be seen with the names of their neighbors in Mr. Leckey's book. They attended the church at Big Whiteley Creek as it was near their home. They spent the whole day at church, which was a day of social diversion, of setting problems right, renewing old acquaintances, airing scandals, making matches, and otherwise uplifting their spirits and setting right the troubled experiences of the week. It was their guide and their help in time of trouble and we may envy them their source of inspiration and refreshment.

John Guthery's family of eleven children were now increasing in stature; indeed some of them were already grown and he had to look to the future. So, after selling his lands in Greene County, Pennsylvania, by a number of deeds of record, he moved by flatboat down the Monongahela and Ohio Rivers to where Portsmouth now stands, and then up the Scioto River to his claim in what is now Pike County, Ohio. His lands are said to have covered several thousand acres. He later laid out the town of Piketon and was instrumental in making it the county seat; years afterward the county seat was moved to Waverly. He died June 1, 1823 and is buried in Mound Cemetery, on his original land. Mound Cemetery contains several Indian mounds and John Guthery, his wife and a daughter who was the mother of the famed Mother Stuart, famous Civil War nurse and Temperance reformer were laid in a brick vault in one of the mounds buried one above the other. Across the road from the cemetery is the site of the old family home of Colonel Guthery. Some years back it was pointed out to several of his descendants by Mr. Charles Daily, another descendant, who was the village druggist at Piketon. He said sometimes they found a brick from the old house on the site, the house itself having been long demolished.

On April 4, 1872, the Pike County Republican published the memoirs of its oldest residents under the subject "Old Folks of Pike County Interviewed". The following article is the result of a conversation with two daughters of Colonel Guthery:

"There was, in the early settlement of the Valley of the Scioto River, one name prominent above the others in the territory composing Pike County. The head of the family was John Guthery; a name we presume spelled in other localities and in the old country G-u-t-h-r-i-e. We suppose it to be of Scotch origin, for John Guthery's progenitors came from Ireland to this country. From this fact one might suppose that we are of Irish descent, but this does not follow. In Oliver Cromwell's time he .....subdued the Northern part of Ireland, especially Londonderry and vicinity, and induced emigrants from England and Scotland of the Protestant faith to go in and possess the land. Hence there are many purely English and Scotch persons to be found in Northern Ireland who do not profess to have any Irish blood in their veins. Those who were descended from the English claim to be English still, and those who recognize their descent as from Scotch ancestry call themselves Scotch-Irish." As a parenthesis we may add that it was not alone in Cromwell's time that the English and Scotch poured into Ireland but in successive waves----in the time of King Henry II, in Edward III's time and during the reign of Henry VII Ireland was ravished by these monarchs and settlers were sent in from both countries to occupy the land, to say nothing of the refugees that were driven into Ireland from Scotland through fear of their lives at home. One example is the widow of the Scotch martyr, Thomas Guthrie, executed in the city square of Edinburgh, who fled for her life from her native land into Northern Ireland because she had preserved some of her heretical husband's tracts. Going back to "Old Folks of Pike County:"

"Some of the best men and women who settled in the American Colonies were Scotch-Irish. Such settled Londonderry, Derry and Derryfield (now Manchester) in Hillsboro County, New Hampshire, also Ryegate, Vermont and certain localities in New York State and Pennsylvania. This leads us to believe that John Guthery was of the old stern Pennsylvania stock and was Scotch-Irish, though his progenitors emigrated from Ireland."

Although the name Guthery was numerous and influential when Pike County was organized in 1815, we believe that not one lives who bears that honored name. Yet there linger two of John Guthery's daughters among us, and it is these persons whom we propose to interview in this issue, under the name of the youngest of the family, viz:

LYDIA PETERS

"My maiden name was Guthery. I was born in Pennsylvania, October 17, 1794, and am the youngest of twelve children---eight sons and four daughters. Their names were William, Archibald, John, Francis, George, Elizabeth, Priscilla, Aaron, Rebecca, Moses, Joseph and Lydia (myself). Except Francis, all came to Ohio in 1797 or 1798 and settled just below where John W. Barnes now resides in Seal township. The homestead farm now constitutes a part of the celebrated Van Meter and a part of the Barnes farms. There my father sat himself down in the dense wilderness, with a wife and eleven children, who had been used to a life in civilized and refined society and all the enjoyment such society affords. It may seem strange to the reader that my father should have sold out a large and well cultivated farm, together with a large chattel property, turn his back upon his associates and endearments of more than fifty years, to take up an abode in the wilderness..... He sold the property in Pennsylvania and received the cash therefor, which enabled him to purchase a large tract of land including the present site of Piketon, extending a mile or so on the South and East a great distance, toward Beaver. We started from near Greensburg (now Greensboro) in Greene County, came down the Monongahela River to Pittsburg, thence to the Ohio River to where Portsmouth now is, though not a tree of the primeval forest was cut; ascended the Scioto River, with his goods in a keel boat, while some of the family rode on horseback over a blazed trail and others came on foot. We passed but one house the whole distance this side of Portsmouth and that was on the river bank where Lucasville now stands. We camped there over night and resumed our journey the next morning. When we reached the spot where our future home was to be Father had to perforce commence felling the forest trees to give even room for the erection of a log cabin to shelter him and his from the storms and rains of Heaven, which he immediately proceeded to do." Here I will interrupt Lydia Peters' account for the comment that Colonel Guthery had luckily four sons old enough to take a man's share in this arduous work. The oldest, William, was at least twenty-five and the others were down the line two years apart. Also there were little boys of thirteen, ten and seven. His wife, too, had help from her daughters not too young to lend a hand to her.

Continuing Mrs. Peters: "Of course he had to depend on wild game, which was then everywhere abundant in Ohio, for the subsistence of those dependent on him. Not to have been a good hunter in those days was as unusual among the settlers as for ducks to refuse to take to water." Also we remember what Lydia Peters does not mention, that not only her father but at least two of her brothers were used to bearing arms in battle.

"In the course of years, a large farm was cleared and his sons and daughters were married and settled around him. Population increased." Even some of his neighbors, Mr. Leckey says, came there and settled near him.

"Population increased and crowded upon him and he was induced to part with a portion of his real estate to immigrants. But the greater part he apportioned to his seven sons. To his daughters he made largesses of money and other property. So he provided for all his children equitably. In the course of time his sons disposed of their real estate, as many sons have done before them and since, where their patrimony was not entailed by the laws of primogeniture.

"My father is remembered as Colonel Guthery. He was a soldier in the war of the American Revolution and rose to the position of Colonel." His rank was really Lieutenant-Colonel. But, as Mr. Leckey says, would likely be known as Colonel, that being the custom.

"When he came west, that title honorably won, accompanied him and he is remembered to this day by that distinction. He was a leading man and often honored by his fellow citizens with responsible trusts. I am unable to furnish any very explicit history of my father, but his family Bible, now in my possession, informs me that he was born April 14th, 1744 and that he married Lydia Baldwin March 13th, 1771 and that he died June, 1823. I remember that it was traditional in our family that my father's family came from Ireland. Baldwin is an English name and while I do not know much of the family away back in the generations that have passed, I am able to give the time of birth and marriage of her whose Christian name I bear. She was born in Virginia, February 12th, 1755 and married my father when she was but little less than seventeen years of age. She was eleven years younger than my father and preceded him to the grave by nearly seven years; in her sixty-first year, July 11th, 1816.

When my father's family came West I was only three and a half years old, so of course I do not remember anything of my native place or state. Of my earliest recollections I can call to mind the fact that my brothers had a wolf trap and would take me out of a morning to see if a wolf was caught. Sometimes two wolves, sometimes one, was in the trap, and then again none. A standing reward was offered in those days for wolf scalps and these rewards stimulated the trapping and shooting of wolves, so that before many years after the first settlements were made they were scarce, and in the course of a generation or so they were nearly extinct. As I grew up the population increased by immigration and of course our acquaintances became more numerous. As time revolved, more and more of the refining influences and improvements in living were introduced and intercourse became general. I went to school in a log schoolhouse on the west side of the Scioto River. I was so young that I do not remember the teacher's name. One of my brothers used to ferry me over the river. A schoolhouse was afterward built on Big Beaver, only a short distance from where the fell house* kept by William Osborne now stands. I remember that Thompson Smith, William Niblick, a Mr. Newingham and my brother Aaron were my teachers in that schoolhouse. Male teachers were exclusively employed when I was a schoolgirl. My first teacher, I remember, had six thumbs, three on each hand. Two grew out of the first joint of the regular thumbs.

"My mother, after she had been here several years, was homesick and longed to return to her old home in Pennsylvania and she and Father once started to make the journey with me on horseback. We got as far as Chillicothe when I was taken sick and my mother returned home with me. Father went on. Father and Mother afterward made the trip together. But in the few years that had intervened things had changed so in Greene County that my mother returned to her family and was ever afterward content.

*Fell house evidently is a place where hides were processed.

FAMILY OF LYDIA BALDWIN GUTHERY,
WIFE OF COLONEL JOHN GUTHERY

Joseph Hackney came from England to America with his parents and settled in New Castle, Delaware. He was married in Old Swedes Church in 1731 to Charity Harlan, daughter of Aaron Harlan. Joseph Hackney died in 1745. His widow, Charity Harlan Hackney was married in 1746 to Francis Baldwin Jr. In 1760 they moved to Frederick County, Virginia. The family were Quakers and records can be found in Hinshaw and "Old Hopewell". Haddon's History of Fayette County, Pennsylvania, also gives part of the record.

Children of Charity Harlan Hackney Baldwin

(A) By Joseph Hackney

1. Sarah Hackney, m. ----- Rees,
2nd m. Thomas Province (his 2nd m.)
(Leckey believes that Sarah Hackney Rees and Thomas Province each had children by their first marriages, later had more children by their own (2nd) marriage. This is based on will on file in Greene County, Pennsylvania.)
2. Mary Hackney, m. ----- Lambert
3. Aaron Hackney, m. (1st) Lydia Rees
(2nd) Hannah Gregg
4. Charity Hackney never married.
5. John Hackney, m. Rebecca (Lathland)
Lindley
6. Joseph Hackney, m. Martha McCool

(B) By *Francis Baldwin Jr.

7. Rebecca Baldwin, m. Aaron Jenkins (James Jenkins, as by one record may be an error, unless each in turn, as she gave deeds as wife of Aaron Jenkins.)
8. Barsheba (Bathsheba) Baldwin, m. William McKay
9. Elizabeth Baldwin, m. Elias Stone who laid out Greensboro, Pennsylvania.
10. *Lydia Baldwin, m. *John Guthery, later Colonel in Pennsylvania militia.

The four Baldwin girls all got warrants to land to which each later received patent in joint tenancy with their respective husbands. (The above from a letter of Leckey to Mrs. Carroll H. May dated January 25, 1950.)

The following account of the Baldwin family is taken from the Baldwin Genealogy by Charles Candee Baldwin:

Tracing back from Lydia Baldwin's father we have Francis Baldwin Sr., who it is inferred was the grandfather of Francis Baldwin Jr., but the name of Francis Baldwin's father has been lost.

Francis Baldwin Sr. came over to America from England with his two brothers, Thomas and John. They first settled, probably at Penn's Neck with other English Baptist families, according to Thomas Baldwin's record, around 1653.

By family tradition and fortified by a statement that Thomas was born in Oxfordshire, England we may justly conclude that this is true of Francis and John. Gilbert Cope thinks they may have been connected with the Baldwins of Buckinghamshire, wealthy yeomen of that county..

Francis Baldwin Sr. is found an early settler in the neighborhood of West Chester County, Pennsylvania. At that time the locality was in Delaware County, Pennsylvania. He was there as early as 1686. That he is the brother of Thomas and John is evidenced by the will of John to sons of his brother Francis, in which he leaves five shillings each to "all my brother Francis' children". The names of only two of these children are given in the will and they inherited, besides, ten pounds. Their names were Thomas and John. Which of these was the probable father of our Francis Jr. is not clear.

Francis Sr.'s name appears in Chester County as witness to deeds in 1691, 1697, 1699 and 1700. In 1691 he received a deed of one hundred acres from Thomas Coebourne, which lay in Chester. The consideration was an annuity. In 1692 John Maddock conveyed fifty acres in Nether Providence, "Nether Cutt", which he purchased of Francis Baldwin. In 1695 he received a record deed from Thomas Coebourne of one hundred acres in Chester, which next year he conveyed to Joseph Coebourne for fifty pounds. Letters of administration were granted August 17th, 1702 to his widow, Cicely, by the Register General at Philadelphia.

Francis Sr. was a miller. He was juror July 19th, 1700. He died in New Castle County in 1702. His wife was Cicely Coebourne, not Colbourne, as given in the Baldwin history and afterward corrected. Cope says he does not know the names of Francis Baldwin Jr.'s children nor where they emigrated. Perhaps they went to Virginia. Again we turn gratefully to Mr. Leckey who supplies this loss of record of our family. They did go to Virginia.

Mr. Leckey's records show that Francis Baldwin Jr. and his wife Charity (Harlan-Hackney) lived in Chester County, Pennsylvania, the same locality as Francis Baldwin Sr. lived and that in 1760 they moved to Berkeley County, Virginia where she and her second husband are buried in the Greene Springs Meeting House Cemetery.

And there in that portion which later became Greene County, Pennsylvania, our little sixteen year old Lydia met John Guthery and became our ancestor.

Children of Colonel John and Lydia Baldwin Guthery.

1. William b. January 4, 1772, m. Catherine Theobald. They had six children. He moved to and died in Illinois.
2. Archibald b. January 20, 1774, m. Nancy Phillips. They had two children. He moved to and died in Indiana. He may have first married Rachel Hudson who was a neighbor back in Greene County. There is a record of such a marriage, which Leckey thinks refers to this Archibald, as all other Gutherys by this name are definitely accounted for.
3. John b. October 25, 1776, m. Ellen Howard whose name is preserved in Howard Run. They had three daughters, Cynthia, Drucilla and Eliza. Eliza's descendants are Arthur Middleton of Marysville, Ohio and Judge William Middleton of Urbana, Ohio, now deceased. His three children are William Middleton of Columbus, Ohio, Judge George Middleton of Bellefontaine, Ohio and a sister, Minnie Middletown Davis of Cincinnati, Ohio.

4. Francis b. January 1, 1778, d. in infancy.
5. George b. March 26, 1779, m. Sarah Howard, cousin to Ellen Howard, who married his brother John. They had four children: Samuel, Baldwin, John and Priscilla. George moved to Illinois and died there.
6. Elizabeth b. January 26, 1781, m. Jonathan Clark. They had five children: Minerva, Joseph, Aaron, Lovie and Charlotte.
7. Priscilla b. January 16, 1783, m. William Collings of Winchester, Ohio, January 1, 1807. Their children were: Maria Louisa, Lydia, Isaac Newton, James, Minerva Jane and Rebecca Baldwin. Priscilla is buried in Mound Cemetery, Piketon, Ohio.

JOSEPH AND HANNAH DEVER GUTHERY.

Joseph Guthery, youngest son of Colonel John and Lydia Baldwin Guthery, was born in Greene County, Pennsylvania, the eleventh child and eighth son. His birth date was March 29, 1790. He was married to Hannah Dever in either 1815 or 1816. Hannah Dever was born January 8, 1796, the daughter of Lieutenant John and Hannah Cubberly Dever. Her mother was the daughter of Dr. James Cubberly, a surgeon in the American Revolution.

Hannah Dever Guthery was particularly loved and respected by her grandchildren. Elizabeth Guthery Gray, a granddaughter, admired and loved her for her fine womanly qualities and for her fine mind and said of her "She could talk with any man on any subject." Surely a tribute to a frontier woman whose chief care must be the bearing and bringing up of her children and the difficulties that beset her in a new country.

Joseph Guthery was in the War of 1812 and received land bounties for his services. From the Roster of Ohio Soldiers in the War of 1812, published by the Adjutant General of Ohio, 1916, p. 154, is the Roll of Capt. David Shelby's Mounted Company (probably Ross County) served from September 4th until October 14th, 1812.

Rank and name of soldier:

Guthery, John Jr.	(Private)
Guthery, John Sr.	(Private)
Guthery, Joseph	(Private)

Pike County was not formed until 1815 and it was partly formed by Ross County, the others being Highland, Adams, Scioto and Jackson.

John Jr. was thirty-six years old when he served in the War of 1812. His brother was twenty-two and their father was sixty-eight.

Later he was engaged in buying, selling and shipping produce and merchandise while he lived in Pike County. This was placed on a raft built for the purpose and rafted down the rivers to New Orleans. In the year 1826 he used all his means and credit in buying a cargo consisting of pork, corn, wheat and general produce and furs and with two others started the raft down to Scioto, down the Ohio and on down the Mississippi to New Orleans. On the way the raft struck a tree that had fallen into the water and the produce was lost. The men barely escaped with their lives.

After settling his debts he began all over again. He was thirty-six years old and life was long before him. So, having left the old troubles behind, he emigrated to newer and fresher troubles. He took his family to the new and unsettled country in Marion County, Ohio toward the north. This was in 1827. His three boys were respectively nine, seven and five years of age. First he located in Salt Rock township, from there they moved to Big Island township and a later move took them to Montgomery township, on what was known as the Flaherty Bottoms. At this place they must have thought a plague had descended upon them for they had a hard time to make a living. All their stock died from a common disease called milksickness, their corn was drowned out by a July freshet, and what remained was eaten and destroyed by squirrels. Executions were issued and everything sold but the cow, which the constable refused to take. (I wish we knew that excellent man's name.) He even went security for the balance, which amounted to something like $16.00. This amount was paid from money earned in the harvest field of a Mr. Alcott at three shillings a day, which was thirty-seven and a half cents a day for Joseph and two shillings or twenty-five cents a day for the second boy, John Dever Guthery. I do not think we can pass over these trials of our people and the fine way they were met without some devout feelings over the honor and industry that was theirs. We must be proud to have the blood of Joseph Guthery in our veins. His three sons never forgot this experience. John Dever often related this story of travail after he himself was an old and prosperous man. It is such a story as many early settlers of our land could relate.

In 1829 they moved across the river into Bowling Green township, the three boys helping to cut timber for a cabin and making troughs for use in collecting the sap from sugar trees out of which to make their sugar for the coming year. In 1837 they moved again, this time to what was later known as the Old Homestead on the banks of Rush Creek, a tributary of the Scioto River. Here Joseph Guthery died in the nearby home of his son, William, on February 5th, 1856. He lived to be only sixty-six years old. But that was a long life for those days.

After his death his wife, Hannah Dever Guthery, went to live with her children, and it was at the home of her youngest son, Isaac, that she passed away on March 7th, 1864, eight years after her husband's death. These two pioneers left behind them a record of unblemished lives as heritage for their many descendants-----a record of personal nobility and worth. They were always mentioned with affection. Both were buried in the Guthery Cemetery at what was then Parr Town, and now near them lie other Gutherys.

Children of Joseph and Hannah Dever Guthery: William, John Dever, Isaac Frazier, Joseph (died in infancy) b. 1826 d. at one year of age, 1827.

THE FAMILY BACKGROUND OF HANNAH DEVER GUTHERY.

The father of Hannah Dever Guthery was Lieutenant John Dever, her mother was Hannah Cubberly, daughter of Dr. James Cubberly, a surgeon of the American Revolution. Of the Cubberlys we shall have more to say.

Lieutenant John Dever was born in Loudon County, Virginia, October 22, 1756. His father was John Dever and his mother was Mary Barnes. They were married in Hampshire County, Virginia. They had three children: John, James, and George, all born in Virginia. The mother, Mary Barnes, died when the youngest son, George, was born in 1770. According to two descendants of George, Miss Margaret Dever Slavens of Jackson, Ohio and Mr. Samuel Slavens, her brother, of Detroit, Michigan, the older John was of Irish ancestry and was born October 20, 1746*. Tradition has it that the ancestry had its origin in early Irish kings of Crusade times. They were "Devergons". The meaning of Devergon is obscure. Professor John V. Kelleher, authority on *This date of birth was more likely 1736.

Mediaeval Irish history at Harvard University, in a letter to Mrs. Carroll H. May on June 10, 1954 says in respect to the Dever family of Ireland:

The name Dever is the same as Dwyer-----the Irish form is O'Duibhidhir or O'Dubhuidhir-----the name of several families of whom the most important were the chiefs of Coill na manach, now Kilnamanagh barony in West County Tipperary. They were originally from Leinster. Dever is usually a northern form of the name. Our branch has believed we are descendants of the great De Vere family of England.

When John Dever, the second, was twenty years old he enlisted with the Colonial troops of the 3rd Maryland regiment on December 10th, 1776. Loudon County is on the Virginia-Maryland line near his home. The regiment was commanded by Colonel Mordecai Gist. John Dever was commissioned 2nd Lieutenant April 1st, 1777. His name is found on the muster rolls of his company for the months of August and September, 1778 as 1st Lieutenant. This rank he held until his discharge on April 8th, 1779.

An old newspaper clipping says he was a soldier under Washington and was with General Gates at the time of Burgoyne's Surrender at Saratoga in 1777. Six years after his discharge from the army he was married to Hannah Cubberly, in 1785. She was then twenty-two years old, having been born June 25, 1763. Their family of eight children were all, excepting possibly the youngest, born in Virginia by 1800. They brought their family to Ohio in 1797, when the new Congressional lands were opened for settlement under a soldier's grant, and settled in Scioto County. Two of his sons served in the War of 1812 and are buried in Scioto County, Ohio. (Our line says it was William and James as John was too young at the time of the war.) George Dever, son of John Dever and Mary Barnes, followed his brother, Lieutenant John Dever, to Ohio with their two children, Solomon and Noah in 1797.

Another account says Lieutenant Dever went to Ohio in 1799 and settled on the west side of the Scioto River, two miles west of the present village of Lucasville and eighteen miles north of Portsmouth. His claim was at the mouth of Big Bear Creek on Virginia Military Bounty land. His brother, George, settled on the east side of the river on Congress lands near Jackson, Ohio. There is no comment on the other brother James. George's descendants still live in Dever valley and in Portsmouth, Ohio. The families came to be known as the East Side Devers and the West Side Devers, from living on opposite sides of the river. Judge Noah Dever of Portsmouth is a descendant of the East Side Devers, his ancestor being George Dever. The old newspaper article says Lieutenant John Dever was a leading citizen and a prosperous man of his day. He was a great lover of horses and cattle. The farm where he settled was owned and lived on by his descendants continuously for over a hundred and fifty years, always with the Dever name. Tradition tells us this was a fine family and we wish we knew for a certainty their origin and more about John Dever himself. He is buried on the Old Homestead in the private burying ground of the family, not far from the house where the present Devers live. On his gravestone is his military record and a square and compass and this epitaph:

Lieutenant John Dever
Who Departed This Life
November 10, 1827, 71 years old.

And also the following lines:

He too was of that patriot band
Which once did aid our native land;
He drew his sword in freedom's cause,
He did protect his country's laws.
His memory blest shall ever be,
By all true friends of Liberty.

Before passing to the story of Hannah Dever Guthery's mother's family, the Cubberlys, and to the record of her own children, it will be interesting to have a backward look at the European background of the Devers. For, whether in Ireland or England, they were most notable. There is good reason to believe that both originated from the same race, though proof is not available and probably never will be. The name has gone through many changes in spelling, in some cases only a close study by experienced antiquarians could find any relation to the original De Vere. Here are some of the surprising changes the centuries have made in a name that began in northern France. To begin with it was De Ver. Then De Vere or Vere and this was the accepted spelling in England and Ireland through many generations. Then as descendants spread farther and farther down the years and became more remote from the early holdings and family traditions they even forgot their descent from a proud race. And in the struggle of life forgot their true name. An "s" was added: Devers, then Devor, Davor, Divier, Divyor, Dayvor, Deavor, Deever, Deavour, and Devore. And Vere became Viar, Fears, Wire, Wyer, Weir, and Weer. How our family came to preserve the name in its true form with no more corruption than a small "v" instead of a capital "V" is a thing we shall not know. But we changed the pronunciation. We call it Dee-Ver. History says De Vere was pronounced De Ver.

THE MATERNAL ANCESTRY OF HANNAH DEVER GUTHERY.
THE CUBBERLYS.

Hannah Dever's mother was Hannah Cubberly, daughter of Dr. James Cubberly, a surgeon in the American Revolution. Virginia war records are silent concerning his service, but it must be remembered that many of the Virginia records are missing, having passed through fire. The family legend is so persistent from descendants as far scattered as the state of Washington down to Southern California, across to Ohio and on to Connecticut, that we must accept it as fact. Some think he lived in Maryland. Boundaries were very indefinite then and Loudon County, from where his daughter emigrated, is on the Maryland border. Dr. Cubberly may have seen service with Maryland troops as John Devers did, although he was a Virginian. A great great granddaughter, Mrs. E. F. Ragan, owns a set of scales which he used----the type used by surgeons of that day. She has, besides, his knee buckles and other interesting objects that her great-grandmother preserved. Mrs. Elizabeth Gould of Santa Monica, California has a silver snuffbox that belonged to him. Mrs. Harrison Shafstall of Marion, Ohio, owns a pair of hand wrought silver cuff links that were worn by her ancestor, Hannah Cubberly, Mrs. Shafstall's great great grandmother. They are marked "H.C.".

A letter to Mrs. Fred Hoch from the late distinguished Prof. Ellwood Cubberly, of Leland Stanford University, gives us all we have of the American Cubberlys. He says it was a tradition in his family that two brothers came from England in the early 18th century. His progenitor was James Cubberly, who settled first on Long Island, then purchased land in Burlington County, New Jersey in 1718. He bought three hundred and fifty acres. From there the family moved westward to Middletown, Ohio, and from there to Richmond, Indiana. This was Ellwood Cubberly's own line. The brother emigrant which Professor Cubberly believes was our ancestor went South "probably to Virginia and later his descendants went into the deep South". He had found them in New Orleans and also in St. Louis. The first Virginia census lists two Cubberlys of Hampshire County.

Cubberly is another very ancient name. It dates back to Saxon times in England. It is found in the Domesday Book as Coberleie and in the annals of Gloucester Abbey, v. 2 of the Bristol and Gloucestershire Archaeological Society publications Cubberly is defined. The name had its origin in Gloucestershire. Cudberlei, another formation, means Cuthbert's lea; lea---old form lei which is lee or meadow. Cuthbert's meadow. There are many forms of spelling which must be when a name is so venerable. Here are some of the spellings that have come down the ages: Cudberlei, Cudberleye, Cutberley, Cubberleg, Cubberleye, Cubberley, Cubberly, Coberlei, Coberley, Coburly, Coberly, Cobberlee, Cobberl, Coburley, Coberle, deComberlie and Coverly. Lately was seen in a current issue of a popular magazine Coverley.

Cuthbert's meadow was the locality where the parish of Cubberly was set up long ago in Gloucestershire. The village of Cubberly was founded, which was dependent on Cubberly Hall or manor. This noble house has been reduced to the size of a farmhouse, with a very few of the ancient walls standing, and the arms of a branch of the great Berkeley family still to be found upon it. They were very rich and grand in the time of Queen Elizabeth I and were called the Berkeleys of Cubberly. Sometimes they used only Cubberly for a surname. They owned the Cubberly lands and a great deal more in surrounding parishes. Volume 16 of the Archaeological Society before mentioned says: "The use of Coberley as an alternative surname was not uncommon in the family. Even in the next century when people's names were much more settled we find Sir John de Coberle summoned as a juror to replace Sir Thomas de Berkeley de Coberle in 1336. While in 1372 the last Sir Thomas de Berkeley of Coberley is called in his Probatio Aetatis Thomas de Coberley."

If our Doctor James Cubberly was descended from this house he was a Berkeley, one of the great families of England. But there is an even chance that his family was not so notable.

It was William's descendant, William Thomas Dever, who was the last of the name as male heir to live on the original Dever homestead, the farm near Lucasville, Ohio in the Dever name for over a hundred and fifty years. The descent from Lieutenant John Dever, first owner of the land, was his son William, his son Joseph, and his son William Thomas.

Of his sons, James and John, and their families, we have no record. James and Mary Dever of Lacon, Illinois and their brother William of Bloomington, Illinois were descended from one of these brothers. The Illinois

William's son Joseph had seven children. We do not know whether William had other children beside Joseph.

WILLIAM GUTHERY AND HIS WIFE LUCINDA CLEVELAND GUTHERY.

Directly across from the old home of John Dever Guthery, Sr., who was the second son of Joseph and Hannah Dever Guthery, in Bowling Green township, Marion County, Ohio, is an old cemetery---the Guthery Cemetery, where many Gutherys and their kin lie. Once, just adjoining this cemetery, a church stood, and next to it a store, and on down the line other buildings, making a village that was called Parr Town. It did not flourish because, when LaRue was settled with its railroad and outlet to markets, Parr Town died utterly. But once it was a center for township trade. In the Baptist Church there Silas Cleveland was pastor. He had several children and one daughter was Lucinda Manville, who was married to William Guthery. His father, Joseph Guthery, lived two or three miles down the road toward New Bloomington, on the bank of Rush Creek, in what was known as the Old Homestead. William was twenty-one when they were married, on August 4, 1839, and Lucinda was twenty. It is likely they went housekeeping in a log house, though another, a frame house, many years later was pointed out to their little granddaughter by her mother, who was their oldest daughter, as the house where she lived when she was a little girl---until she was twelve years old. The house was about two or three miles from Parr Town, on the same road as the Old Homestead, but on a curve that leads to New Bloomington, Ohio. It was a simple house that owed its charm to an open porch, with wings of the house on each side, and an upper balcony. A lane began at the road and sank to a lower level to reach the house in a hollow. Trees were at the front and an orchard behind. They lived here for about fifteen years, then William wanted more land so he sold the farm and bought another on the banks of Paw Paw Creek not far from Marseilles, Ohio. It was on a side road off the main highway that runs directly between La Rue and Marseilles. The side road was then a leafy lane and the Paw Paw Creek crossed it before it turned and climbed a hill to William Guthery's house. It was beautiful country, wooded and slightly hilly and the soil very productive. In later years John Dever Guthery Jr., William's youngest son, owned a farm about two miles beyond, toward Marseilles, and it was inherited by his daughters, Gladys Crim, Lois Weinman and Marie Frank.

There were fine pastures and William raised livestock to sell and bought others to sell. He was becoming more and more prosperous and one of the leading young farmers of his county. His brother, John Dever Guthery, Sr. often said he was the best business man of the three brothers. He took an active part in politics, being an ardent Democrat, as all the Gutherys then were. His daughter, Elizabeth, rode beside him on her dun colored mare, Vesta, while, with the red sash of the marshal of the day, worn from shoulder to waist, he headed the procession on political rally day. There was a close friendship between them. They understood each other; she was his oldest living child and constant companion. He talked to her about his business, and she learned from him a love of animals and the outdoors, and an understanding of managing a farm. They looked alike. A picture of him shows him to have had wide open gray eyes far apart, hair worn long and turned under as was the fashion of the day, close lips and a handsome nose. He wore no beard. He looks very serious and dignified, but his son John Dever Jr., remembered how his father played with him and how he trotted him on his knee, singing songs that came out of his head as he went along.

One of them was:

I looked in a book and what did I see!
A pretty little boy upon my knee.

Lucinda Cleveland Guthery was a gentle, amiable young mother, never known to lose her temper, so John Guthery Sr. said. She had a fine family background, being a direct descendant of Governor William Bradford of the Mayflower, Governor of the Plymouth Colony for thirty-six years, and leader of his people, and of his son William, Major and Deputy-Governor of the Plymouth Colony. She belonged to the same line of descent as President Grover Cleveland, their common ancestor being the pioneer Moses Cleveland, of Ipswich, Massachusetts in 1635. Another descendant of the first Moses was that Moses who founded Cleveland, Ohio. The four sons of the first Moses, with Major James Fitch, another ancestor of Lucinda's, opened up lands in Eastern Connecticut and made settlements at Plainfield and Canterbury. Major Fitch was a great grandson of Sir Thomas Fitch of Bocking Parish, Essex County, England. (See Cleveland family history.) Her father, the Reverend Mr. Silas Hall Cleveland, was an active member of his community, not only as a pastor but in civic affairs. He was the first

Justice of the Peace in Bowling Green township, Marion County, Ohio.

Their future in a material way looked very bright and then, in the flower of his manhood, at forty-six years of age, William Guthery died. The oldest daughter, Elizabeth, was twenty-one, the oldest son, Isaac Frazier, named for his uncle, was fourteen, while William James and John Dever Jr. were but seven and five respectively. It is a terrible handicap to a boy to grow up without a good father. These boy children grew up useful and good men. It was a hard pull for the mother. She devoted her life to her children. Besides managing the farm she made their clothing from the wool off the backs of their own sheep. She carded it and wove it, made their shirts, stockings and socks. She had a loom upstairs and carried a kettle of coals up with her to keep her feet warm while she sat weaving. They grew almost all they ate and had their meat from their own farm animals; money was scarce during the Civil War and she earned some by weaving hats of rye straw. Nine years after they moved to this farm she had to take over alone and she bravely struggled on for almost sixteen years, dying at the home of her son Isaac at the age of sixty years. She and her husband lie with other Gutherys in the Guthery Cemetery at what was once Parr Town. For Lucinda's family record see the history of the Cleveland family. Included in this account is a fragment of a large treatise consisting of three volumes on the Clevelandlands of America, from which has been taken the family line herein given.

Children of William and Lucinda Cleveland Guthery:
Elizabeth, Hannah, Joseph, Rachel, Isaac Frazier Jr.,
Lydia Louise, Minerva Jane, Susan Emily, William James and John Dever Jr.

CLEVELAND FAMILY HISTORY

The family name of Cleveland goes back to the 11th century A.D. The first known by that name was Thorkil, a Saxon landowner in or before 1066 at Gisborough, in the district of Cleveland, Yorkshire, England. This district of Cleveland is in the North Riding, Yorkshire being divided into "Ridings". The name means "cliff-land" and has, through various spellings, come to have the present day accepted form.

Moses Cleveland, the first Cleveland ancestor of which we have any account in America, is the common ancestor of all Clevelands of New England origin. There is also a Virginia branch of the Clevelands which for our present purposes we will overlook.

1. MOSES CLEVELAND came as a lad of 11 years from Ipswich, Suffolk County, England, in 1635. According to family tradition, he sailed from London, England and landed probably either at Plymouth or Boston, Mass. He came as an apprentice, unaccompanied by any relative, and the source of his birth is unknown. It is family tradition that one of his descendants visited a country gentleman by the name of Cleveland back in England and was cordially welcomed. This gentleman offered to educate the sons of the American family if they would consent to travel to England. This may have had some significance respecting Moses Cleveland's birth, or may not. We do not know.

According to court files in Woburn, Mass., Moses Cleveland was thirty-nine years old in 1663. It is therefore assumed that he was born in 1624, and probably at Ipswich, England. He must have been a very promising lad, and the man to whom he was apprenticed must have generously furthered any ambitions he may have had, for we find recorded a grant of public land to Moses Cleveland, free man, by the Town of Woburn in 1643, when he was but nineteen years old. In 1662 his name is one of three witnesses who sign a call for a town meeting. And in 1663 he is on the militia muster rolls, viz: Moses Cleveland, aged thirty-nine years. (From Denis Lynch's Life of Grover Cleveland).

He was married in Woburn on September 26, 1648, at the age of twenty-eight, to Miss Ann Winn who was twenty-two or thereabouts. She was born about 1826, according to family tradition, in Wales, or some say in England, the daughter of Edward and Joanna (-----) Winn. Their children, all born at Woburn, Mass., were as follows:

Moses <sup>2</sup>	b. September 1, 1651, m. Ruth Norton
Hannah <sup>2</sup>	b. August 4, 1653, m. Thomas Hinshaw
Aaron <sup>2</sup>	b. January 10, 1655, m. Dorcas Wilson - (Ancestor of President Cleveland)
Samuel <sup>2</sup>	b. June 9, 1657, m. Jane Keyes

Miriam<sup>2</sup> b. July 10, 1659, m. Thomas Foskett Joanna<sup>2</sup> b. September 19, 1661 (Died in childhood.)
 Edward<sup>2</sup> b. May 20, 1663, m. Deliverance Palmer
 Josiah<sup>2*</sup> b. February 26, 1666 or 7, m. Mary Bates.
 Isaac<sup>2</sup> b. May 11, 1669, m. Elizabeth Curtice
 Joanna<sup>2</sup> (again), b. April 5, 1670, m. Joseph
 Keyes
 Enoch<sup>2</sup> b. August 1, 1671, m. Elizabeth Counts

Both Moses and his wife, Ann, died in Woburn and are probably buried in the Old First Burying Ground in what is now North Woburn, Middlesex County, Mass. They are probably buried near their son, Aaron, who is the ancestor of President Grover Cleveland. Moses died January 9, 1701 or '02 at seventy-seven or seventy-eight years of age. Ann lived to be about fifty-six years old, dying prior to May 6, 1682. Aaron Cleveland's grave can be seen in the Old First Burying Ground at North Woburn, Mass.

2. JOSIAH CLEVELAND<sup>2</sup>, eighth child of Moses and Ann Winn Cleveland, and the ancestor of our line, was born in Woburn, Massachusetts on February 26, 1666 or 1667. He married Mary Bates, at Chelmsford, Massachusetts about 1689. She was born in Chelmsford on May 8, 1667. They had eleven children, as follows:

In 1688-89 Josiah Cleveland served in the Indian Wars, in Maine it is believed. Both he and his brother

*Our ancestor.

Samuel settled in Chelmsford, Mass., in 1689. Thus, Josiah served in the war, settled in Chelmsford, and married, all within the space of two years, at only about twenty-three years of age. Samuel emigrated to Connecticut, and Josiah followed him to Plainfield, to the portion of that town which afterward became Canterbury. Samuel and Josiah were the first Clevelands to settle in Canterbury, Connecticut in 1694. Dates and place of birth of Josiah's children show that this date is too early for him. So, as the record says, Josiah followed Samuel, it is probable that he did not take up residence in Connecticut until 1699 when he purchased land. About 1699 they were joined by Edward and Isaac. Samuel was married three times. There was then only one white (English) family in that town. The west side of the Quinebaug River was first settled in 1690. In 1698, Josiah, Samuel and others were made trustees of lands west of the Quinebaug by Owaneco, chief of the Mohegans. In 1699 Josiah purchased 176 acres of the Indian Chief, who was then Peagscommock. The two brothers signed a petition to the General Court for the organization of Plainfield on May 31, 1699. Josiah was one of ten in a committee of the oldest and most respected inhabitants to assume jurisdiction of their territory. He was then about thirty-three years old. Josiah, Samuel and their brother Isaac were among the freeholders and proprietors of Plainfield applying for a separate township. Plainfield was divided October, 1703, and the west side was named Canterbury. It had then only ten inhabitants signing the articles of division. Josiah in 1698-99 bought Plainfield land at Wanungattuck, both sides of Tadneck (Tatnic) Hill. The Clevelands' residences were in the east of the town overlooking Quinebaug Valley.

The Cleveland family was a large and important one in the parish (Canterbury) and was connected by marriage with others of the first families. (From a Historical Discourse by the Rev. Andrew J. Hetrick.)

Josiah died in Canterbury, Connecticut on April 26, 1709 at the age of about forty-three. Mary Bates Cleveland, his wife, died in Canterbury on July 20, 1743, aged seventy-six years.

3. HENRY CLEVELAND<sup>3</sup>, sixth child of Josiah and Mary Bates Cleveland, and the ancestor in our line, was born in Chelmsford, Massachusetts, on December 22, 1699. He was married on March 19, 1718 to Lucy Fitch, daughter of James and Alice Bradford Adams Fitch. Lucy Fitch was born 1700?. She was the descendant of Sir Thomas Fitch, baronet of Essex County, England. The Fitch family had numerous estates there. For a full account of the family see Marant's History of Essex. On her mother's side, Lucy Fitch was the great-granddaughter of Gov. William Bradford of Plymouth Colony. He came over on the Mayflower in 1620, and was elected Governor in 1621. His son, William Bradford, was deputy governor of Plymouth Colony; b. June 17, 1625, d. February 20, 1704. Alice Bradford, mother of Lucy Fitch, married first the Rev. William Adams; and secondly, Major James Fitch. (See Savage: Genealogical Dictionary.) (See ancestry of Lucy Fitch at the conclusion of the Cleveland Annals of this history.)

Henry Cleveland was a member of the Assembly in 1739. He was made Ensign of the 2nd Company Canterbury trainband. In the session of May 1746, he was commissioned Lieutenant of the 1st Company at Mansfield. This appointment was in a regiment to be raised in the colony for an expedition against Canada (Louisburg, Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, Old French War) King George's War. He is probably buried at "the most ancient cemetery in Tolland County, which was laid out in 1696 at Pond Place", now known as Mansfield Center.

Henry Cleveland died either at Canterbury or Mansfield, Connecticut, about 1779. The children of Henry and Lucy Fitch Cleveland were as follows:

NAME	BIRTH-DATE
William <sup>4*</sup>	July 7, 1719
Nehemiah <sup>4</sup>	July 20 or 30, 1721
Lucy <sup>4</sup>	March 2, 1724 or '25
Jabez <sup>4</sup>	November 4, 1727 d. at Canterbury, Conn., November 13, 1736
Jabez <sup>4</sup> (again)	bap. November 6, 1737 at Canterbury

Henry Cleveland first lived at Canterbury (his family having moved there shortly after his birth). He moved to Mansfield before 1746. He and his wife Lucy were admitted by letter to the church at Mansfield April 19, 1747; withdrew November 1, 1762.

4. WILLIAM CLEVELAND<sup>4</sup>, first child of Henry and Lucy Fitch Cleveland, and the ancestor in our line, was born July 7, 1719. He was married to Rachel Warren probably at Plainfield, Connecticut. She was born, probably on August 23, 1717, supposedly at Windsor, Massachusetts, the daughter of Jacob and Abigail Haines Warren. Their marriage is recorded both at Plainfield and Canterbury, Connecticut. He emigrated from Mansfield, Connecticut, to Dalton, Massachusetts, in 1750. He was a farmer and miller. About 1760 he built the first mill at Windsor, Massachusetts, on land granted by the King of England, attracted by the fine water power there. At that time that part of the country was a wilderness. The last remains of the mill are two large millstones preserved on the old mill site at Dalton, Massachusetts. Cut in the stones is the inscription: "William Cleveland built this mill in 1760". He deeded land to his son William in Gageborough, now Windsor, Berkshire County, in 1772. He was captain in the French and Indian War of 1756-63. William and Rachel Warren Cleveland had eleven children. William died in Windsor, Berkshire County, Massachusetts, in 1791 or '92.

The children of William Cleveland and Rachel Warren were as follows:

Silas Hall was married again, to Mrs. Mary Burnside Osborn, daughter of Alexander Burnside. Mary Burnside was born March 10, 1811 in Green Briar County, West Virginia. Silas Hall was a Baptist clergyman who served in the following Ohio parishes: Oxford, Parrtown, Westfield, Marlborough, and Norton. They had ten children, three of whom died in infancy.

For a time William and Lucinda Cleveland Guthrie lived near the old homestead on the banks of Rush Creek, near Parrtown (no longer existing), Marion County, Ohio. Near them lived William's brothers, John and Isaac. Each was doing well, financially, and were fine business men. William sold his farm and moved to the banks of PawPaw Creek, near Marseilles, Ohio. They lived there until his death on March 20, 1863. Lucinda was left with seven children and eighty acres of land; she kept her family together and her land intact. The house was long and low, with fireplaces in the rooms; a lane led to a yard of flowers and shrubs. A granddaughter, Mrs. Grace Gray Hoch, remembers eating from sprigged china and cups without handles when visiting her grandmother Lucinda.

Lucinda Cleveland Guthrie died August 4, 1879, and is buried beside her husband, William, in the Guthery, or Parrtown, Cemetery, several miles east of LaRue, Marion County, Ohio.

PATERNAL ANCESTRY OF LUCY FITCH CLEVELAND

The Fitch family is of Saxon origin. They had estates in various shires of England, but our line stems directly from those in Kent and Essex Counties.

SIR THOMAS FITCH of Eltham, Kent County was knighted by Charles I of England. He was a judge and baronet.

THOMAS FITCH born 1590 in Bocking parish, Essex County, where so many of the family was found, inherited an estate near Braintree, Essex County and died there in 1645. He married Ann Pew in 1611, August 8th. As a widow she later came to New England with her three sons,

- Our ancestor

one, James, being our ancestor.

JAMES FITCH (later Reverend), son of Thomas and Ann Pew Fitch was born December (or October) 24, 1622 at Bocking parish, Essex County, England, came in 1638 to America. He studied seven years with the Reverend Thomas Hooker and Samuel Stone of Hartford. He was ordained at Saybrook, Connecticut. He helped settle Norwich, Connecticut. He later moved to Canterbury, Connecticut. He was married twice. First to Abigail Whitfield, cousin of the poet Shelley. Among their several children was our Major James Fitch.

MAJOR JAMES FITCH, son of The Reverend James and Abigail Whitfield Fitch, was born on August 2, 1647, at Saybrook, Connecticut, married as his second wife Alice Bradford (Adams) wife of the Reverend William Adams and daughter of Major William Bradford of Plymouth, Massachusetts, and granddaughter of Governor William Bradford of the Plymouth Colony and passenger of the Mayflower. They were married May 8, 1687 in Norwich, Connecticut. His first wife was Priscilla Mason. He was virtually the proprietor of Canterbury. He built the first house west of the Quinebaug River in 1697. From the Indian Chief Owaneco he bought the township of Pomfret, Connecticut. Living first at Norwich, his activities were directed from there.

He was a remarkable man of his time. There were no projects of the colony of which he was not either the instigator or leader. He was almost the largest landholder in Connecticut, buying of the Indians and obtaining grants until his holdings covered thousands of acres. With such wealth and its attending responsibilities and necessary interests, he naturally came up against other men's ambitions and as a result suffered from their jealousies and hindrances. When things at Norwich became too difficult he moved his family to Canterbury. Here he built a large house on the Norwich-Brooklyn road, the first frame house of the community, and his public duties made it a meeting place of many conferences so that a road was made from Brooklyn (Connecticut) to his door. He was called the Father of Windham County. He was deeply interested in the progress of the colony and in education, he was brave, courageous, high-tempered, warm hearted and public spirited. He presented a tract of over six hundred acres at Killingly to the Commonwealth for a college which was afterward moved to New Haven and became Yale University. There is a gateway in the beautiful Branford Court which the Memorial Gateway opens into. Inscribed on the stone is: "Major James F. Fitch of Plainfield who made generous offer in 1701 of land and materials for the original buildings of Yale College". This is somewhat misleading. He made offer and it was accepted!

Because of his wealth and irascibility he made many enemies and so many of his projects came to nothing that it is said he died a sad and disappointed old man. He died at Canterbury November 10, 1727 and is buried there in the Cleveland Cemetery. A study of his life, of which much has been written, is very rewarding.

LUCY FITCH, daughter of James F. and Alice Bradford (Adams) Fitch, who married Henry Cleveland and is our connecting link to the Fitch and Bradford families, has already received a biographical item.

The history of this great man cannot be told in a few short paragraphs. From his thirtieth year to the rest of his life he was repeatedly elected Governor of the Plymouth colony. A passenger on the Mayflower, he saved the bitterly suffering group from extinction. He was governor, judge, clerk, business manager, writer, classical scholar. One of the truly great men of all time. See his own book, Of Plimoth Plantation and Bradford Smith's biography Bradford of Plymouth.

ALICE BRADFORD (ADAMS), daughter of Major William and Alice Richards Bradford, and granddaughter to Governor William Bradford of the Mayflower Pilgrims, born ---- 1661 at Plymouth, Massachusetts, married the Rev. Two years later, in 1687, she married Major James Fitch, who had three children by a first marriage, and to them were born eleven children: Abigail, Ebenezer, Daniel, John, Bridget, Jerusha, William, Jabez, Lucy (our ancestor), Theophilus and Alice. There were then eighteen children between them over the course of years, though some were certainly grown and gone before the others came on to the scene. It is said that remnants of the house where this lively household lived on the Norwich-Brooklyn road at Canterbury may be found.

Alice Bradford (Adams) Fitch died in 1745. She is buried in the Cleveland Cemetery at Canterbury, Connecticut. On her burial stone was: "In memory of Mrs. Abee (Alice) Fitch, daughter of Honorable Wm. Bradford Esq. Lieut. Gov. of the Colony of New Plymouth, Relict of ye Honorable James Fitch Esq. late of Canterbury. A person of rare qualities and excellent endowments. An example of virtue and patron of piety. She after an exemplary life fell asleep March 15, A.D. ....84 years of age". She died in 1745. Taken from Inscriptions in the Cleveland Cemetery, Canterbury, Connecticut. In New England Historical and Genealogical Register 1916 v.70, pp. 342-346.

JOHN DEVER GUTHERY SR. AND HIS WIFE SUSAN FREDERICK GUTHERY.

Two years before his father's, Joseph Guthery's, death, John Guthery and Susan Frederick were married. He was thirty-five and she twenty-nine. They had lived since childhood "down the road" from each other, her father's farm being across the road from the Parr Town village stores and church. When they were married, they went to live on a farm near LaRue, but they lost that place and they then bought Susan's father's farm from the other Frederick heirs and lived there the rest of their lives. They prospered and, owing to his unusual business ability in farming, trading and stock raising, their lands increased on both sides of the road after Parr Town no longer existed, until their holdings were more than three thousand acres, a very large holding for Ohio and the largest in Marion County. The old abandoned church that Silas Cleveland had preached in became one of the granaries on their farm.

John Guthery has held local office since young manhood. He was Justice of the Peace for twenty years. Often he went into the backwoods to perform marriage ceremonies. He was township clerk for nine years, land appraiser three times.

He formed with his grown sons the firm of John D. Guthery and Sons which carried on for many years. So much work was required in the legal handling of the estate that tradition says he urged his youngest son, Fred, to take up law as a profession for himself and as aid to the family. From 1876 to 1879 he was State Representative.

He and his sons were political leaders of their party (Democratic) in the county, travelling about addressing the people on the issues of the day. They were all brilliant speakers and convincing in debate.

He was a tall, spare man with a swinging walk; a book on the Scottish Guthries says this was a family characteristic. He had blue-gray eyes, very clear and bright, a straight nose with the winged nostrils repeated in other Gutherys of his generation and some nieces and nephews, and the close lips of the race which was also noted in the Scottish Guthries. Usually grave, he had his fund of humor which was dry and expressed itself with a quiet smile or gentle inward laugh. Thinking how he seemed, one thinks, What a grand old man! Of that race called men of "long-limbs, long knives, long guns and long memories"--- the Scotch-Irish.

Susan came from a fine family and like all good girls of her day was well trained in every thing needful as a companion and helper of a busy man like her husband: sewing, knitting, weaving, quilting, poultry raising including rearing guinea fowl and pea fowl, cheese making, butter making. What a sweet place her milk house was, in its cool and fragrant cleanness. Flower raising, fruit cultivation with help from the men. The farm was almost self sustaining in its production of foods. The big white house was a busy place supplementing the stir and movement and hum of the outside fields.

Her charity and love covered not only her own numerous family but her neighbors--no one ever heard a cruel word pass her lips.

When she died, at her memorial service was read those lines from Proverbs that were agreed by those who listened to be a true description of her:

"Who can find a virtuous woman for her price is far above rubies.

"The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her, so that he shall have no need of spoil.

"She will do him good and not evil all the days of her life."

After her death he lived only a few months, though there seemed no reason why he should not go on living many years. It seemed as though in going she had taken too much of him with her. They were carried across the road to the family burying ground where so many other Gutherys and Fredericks lay that had been close to them in life.

Their children were: Joseph Dawson, James Buchanan, Rachel Anna, William Lloyd, John Hamil, Isaac Sherman, Frederick Earhart and Alma Dell.

THE FREDERICK FAMILY

The parents of Susan and Rachel Frederick Guthery were John and Lydia (Earhart) Frederick.

They came from the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia and settled at Parr Town, Marion County, Ohio. When the two Frederick girls married John Dever Guthery and Isaac Frazier Guthery they lived on adjoining farms for a number of years.

Details of Frederick family history are not available.

The children of John and Lydia Earhart Frederick are: Matilda, Anne, Catherine, Simon, Rachel, Philip E., Susan, Elizabeth, Lydia, John F., Eve, and Mary.

ISAAC FRAZIER GUTHRIE AND HIS WIFE,
RACHEL FREDERICK GUTHRIE

Rachel and Isaac Guthrie settled on a farm adjoining the old John D. Guthery farm near LaRue, Ohio, Bowling Green Township now (1956) owned by William Guthery, their grand nephew. All of their children were born there and they continued to live there until their children were grown. They were married when they were quite young and the family coming early made a lively household. A niece, Elizabeth Guthrie, was with her aunt a great deal during these years and she remarked that they were children with their children---fun going on all the time. Isaac was rather short for a Guthrie, with red hair, plump too and jovial. Rachel was tall, straight and slender, a lovely gracious woman.

Their sons and daughters all went away to school after their country schooling and all of them taught school. Minnie was in school in Caledonia when her brother, Upton, was Superintendent there, according to a little Memory Book in possession of her daughter, Rachel Thompson. This was in 1879-80, and inscribed among her schoolmates is the name Warren G. Harding. The next year she went to Ohio Wesleyan Female Seminary. Her twin sister, Libbie, likely followed the same pattern.

On the flyleaf of her Caesar's Commentaries is her name: Minnie Guthrie, Monnett Hall, Delaware, Ohio.

Isaac was Justice of the Peace for many years and County Commissioner in 1869. He was a Member of F. & A.M. Lodge, No. 462, LaRue, Ohio.

They lived in Ohio fifty-eight years. They were on a farm in 1877, as a grandniece, Grace Gray Hoch, remembers being there at an all day party which she says was the in-fair for their son Philip's wedding. Likely they moved to Marion soon afterward which subsequent events seem to prove.

Their house in Marion was on West Church Street, just across from their daughter, Ollie, and her husband, Lester Clelland. Living next door to the Clellands was the George B. Christian, Sr. family. The son, George, Jr., was to be President Warren G. Harding's private secretary. The site of these two houses is now occupied by the Eber Baker School, but the Isaac Guthrie house still stands and is not much changed.

In 1892 their son, Upton, defeated Warren G. Harding for County Auditor. The Marion Star later carried an eulogy of Upton as auditor and said he was "ideal" for the position, a form of expression then currently in vogue. But whatever Upton Guthrie did was done with all his integrity.

From Rachel Starrett Thompson comes the information of why and how they went west. She had this from her mother's and grandmother's scrapbooks and notes on family affairs by her uncle, William Guthrie.

"In the fall of 1878 William E. Guthrie, aged 29, made a trip west to Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory, partly for adventure and partly to investigate the open range cattle business then at its peak." His brother, Silas, was at this time Sheriff of Marion County. "He liked the west so well that he stayed and next year in 1879 his brother joined him and, together with their father, they established a fine cattle ranch on the La Bonte Creek, about one hundred and fifty miles northwest of Cheyenne.

Their brother, Upton, made a trip to Wyoming in 1880. Father I. F. Guthrie came for a visit in 1881. Mother Rachel Guthrie spent the summer of 1882 with her boys on the ranch and gained back her failing health.

Then three years later her health began to fail again and plans were made to come west again for the change of climate. The home farm was leased to the youngest son, Philip, and Father and Mother Guthrie and the two younger daughters, Minnie and Libbie, moved in November, 1885, to Clarks, Nebraska, and established a home there. Mother's health improved. Father soon began to buy cattle to ship to Omaha and finally bought a farm and thought less and less about returning to Ohio.

He had never been ill a day until he was attacked by what we now think was acute appendicitis on December 23, 1887. He was buried Christmas Day, 1887, at Clarks, Nebraska. After her husband's death, Rachel continued to live in Clarks, next door to her daughter, Minnie Starrett, and her family.

Ollie and her husband, Lester Clelland, went to Wyoming in the eighties. They bought the abandoned buildings of old Fort Fetterman and developed a good stock ranch irrigating farm lands about twelve miles from Douglas, Wyoming. Both are buried at Douglas.

Philip took his family west in 1892 and operated a ranch near Kearney, Nebraska, later at Clarks.

Upton did not move west but lived in Marion all his life. He was one of the county's most prominent men, constantly holding public office. Silas and William Guthrie went through and were participants in the dramatic period of the Johnson County War. Silas nearly lost his life and William was among those imprisoned. The story is outside the range of this account and may be read in the historic accounts of that time.

William's notes on their holdings are as follows: "Our cattle company had established feed yards at Clarks for the purpose of feeding such of our steers as did not get fat on the Wyoming range. Our feeding operations developed into quite an extensive business. For several years we fed about one thousand steers each winter. These were shipped to Omaha stock yards and from there to eastern markets and to England. This business required the personal management of either my brother (Silas) or myself and our feeding deal finally developed into a second headquarters for our cattle company." From their nephew, Sam F. Russell, whose father J. B. Russell, husband of Libbie Guthrie, managed the Omaha ranch and was an important factor in the success of the enterprise, comes the following: "My two uncles, Silas and William Guthrie, owned a large ranch in partnership with a Mr. Gibson from Omaha. I was born on this ranch. The post office was La Bonte, Converse County, Wyoming. We received our mail once a week in summer, but in winter blizzards sometimes made passage impossible for weeks. The Guthrie-Gibson ranch was very profitable. Both sheep and cattle were carried, one of the first in the great range country to handle both cattle and sheep in one operation. Thirty thousand breeding ewes and three thousand head of Hereford cows were kept for breeding. There was also a large herd of semi-wild horses. Cattle were on one side of North Platte River, sheep on the other. Cowboys and shearers were kept separate too, but they managed to get together once for a brisk shooting war in which several good hot-headed citizens were killed. The Guthries maintained their interests here for a generation."

Silas was President, William General Manager of the company. William was Director of the Wyoming Livestock Association in 1883. In 1888 he conducted the famous Last Roundup in Nebraska's North Platte Valley. He and his men camped near Scottsbluff. He was elected to the 11th Territorial Legislature in 1890. Amusingly the Cheyenne Sun said Mr. Guthrie is politically a Democrat but not in any respect an offensive partisan. Which seems to imply that he was somewhat of a political phenomenon, it also gives us an inkling of the political leanings of the Cheyenne Sun. He was on the Standing Committee on Statehood and Credentials to Congress; Stockraising and Stock Laws; Internal Improvements and Public Highways; also Engrossments. In 1898 he moved to Omaha. The Annals of Wyoming for July, 1927, carried an article by him on the Open Range Cattle Business in Wyoming. In 1900 he sold his share to his brother, Silas, and Mr. Gibson, and moved to Scottsbluff, Nebraska, where he developed a sugar beet business. In 1914 he moved to Bridgeport, Nebraska, where he was a first citizen, among many activities being director of the irrigation project and for the planting and distribution of the Chinese elms so notable in that city.

Silas sold his interest to Mr. Gibson and moved to Moorcroft, Wyoming, where he ran a large sheep ranch until his death. He was one of the important men of the country round and it has been said that his interests and accomplishments would make a book in themselves. He did not keep a record of his life for us to draw from but he remains in men's minds one of the noble figures in Wyoming history. He was President of the big cattle
